

Professional Liability Litigation

Protecting Your Practice

For a professional, one of your most valuable assets is your good name. However, a malpractice issue or government investigation can impact your ability to help your clients and practice in your chosen field. Professionals have to be increasingly aware of the risk, regulations, and liabilities surrounding their practices, especially in fields such as law, engineering, accounting and medicine.

Brooks Pierce professional liability attorneys take pride in protecting clients against malpractice claims, litigation, and regulatory investigations. We represent accountants, lawyers, appraisers, health care workers, and social workers, among others.

Our experience includes:

- Litigation, mediation and arbitration – we defend our clients against claims of malpractice, fraud, negligence, breach of fiduciary duty, conspiracy, unfair trade practices, securities violations, and other liability claims. Our team recently won a seven-figure arbitration award for our client against claims of negligent malpractice.
- Representation before administrative boards – we have successfully represented professionals before the North Carolina State Bar, the North Carolina Medical Board, the North Carolina State Board of CPA Examiners, the North Carolina Nursing Board, the North Carolina Social Work Licensing Board, and other regulatory agencies.

As attorneys, we understand the risk and liability associated with providing professional services.

How can we protect your practice?
