Our Digital Media and Data Privacy Law Blog was borne out of the firm's Newsroom Law Blog. Given the number of new interactive platforms—and with social media steadily becoming a primary source for both of content and marketing information—content curation and delivery is expanding in ways few imagined. Our practice is expanding with it. This blog will discuss issues that affect all businesses (from large media organizations to small retailers) who use digital media—from intellectual property to data security to online content and marketing.
