

Brooks Pierce Hosts Webinar on Navigating Varying Ideologies in the Workplace

06.16.2021

Brooks Pierce attorneys Beth Langley and Sarah Saint presented a webinar on the nuances of anti-discrimination laws on June 15. SHRM credit was provided for this webinar.

The webinar, “Navigating Varying Ideologies in the Workplace,” focused on legal decisions that prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity, recent revisions to EEOC guidance related to religious discrimination, North Carolina’s new anti-discrimination ordinances and their impact on employers, and racial equity conversations.

Langley has over 25 years of experience representing businesses in employment litigation in state and federal courts and administrative proceedings, including discrimination matters, civil rights, executive compensation disputes, non-competition agreements and trade secret protection. She counsels employers of all sizes in an array of employment law issues including regulatory and statutory compliance, litigation avoidance and dispute resolution.

Saint represents employers before government agencies and in state and federal courts on numerous employment law matters, including EEOC charges and lawsuits, common law employment claims, contract disputes, and discrimination and harassment claims. Saint also counsels clients on compliance with state and federal laws, employment policies and handbooks, and employment agreements. She has particular experience with civil rights claims, representing parties on both sides of civil rights and discrimination-related lawsuits.
