Brooks Pierce is excited to sponsor the University of North Carolina Law Review's annual banquet on March 31.

The North Carolina Law Review is a student-operated journal at the University of North Carolina School of Law which publishes scholarship relevant to the interests of judges, attorneys, researchers and students in North Carolina and nationwide.

A significant portion of our lawyers participated in roles with their respective law school publications, honing their analytical skills. Our lawyers embody diverse backgrounds and viewpoints, yet share much in common. They are committed to excellence and integrity in all they do. Our lawyers strive not just to anticipate problems but to come armed with innovative solutions. Our community fosters independence, innovation and agility. We prize intellectual curiosity, initiative and resilience.
