

New Associate Joins Brooks Pierce's Raleigh Office

10.02.2018

Leading North Carolina law firm Brooks Pierce is excited to announce the continued growth of its Raleigh office with the addition of Eric Fletcher as an associate. Fletcher will work primarily with the firm's litigation practice.

"We are pleased to add another talented litigator to our Raleigh office," said Brooks Pierce managing partner Reid Phillips. "Eric has a strong background and I am confident his experience will be a benefit to our clients."

Fletcher represents businesses and individuals in a wide range of federal and state litigation, including appellate litigation. His experience includes high-profile cases focused on issues of commercial, patent, constitutional and criminal law at all levels of state and federal court, including the U.S. Supreme Court. He is admitted to the Massachusetts Bar and is currently seeking admission to the North Carolina State Bar.

Fletcher earned his bachelor's degree from University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and his juris doctorate from Harvard Law School, where he was a member of the Harvard Law Review. He served as a law clerk to Judge Michael Boudin of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.
