

Tony Copeland Participates in Business North Carolina 2023 Economic Forecast Roundtable

12.27.2022

Brooks Pierce's Senior Economic Development and Corporate Strategist Tony Copeland will participate in Business North Carolina's panel discussion on the state of the economy for 2023. The event will be held at 2 p.m. on Jan. 5 at Campbell University Law School in Raleigh.

The panel will discuss North Carolina's economic forecast for 2023, including anticipated economic growth, regulation changes and how companies can best take advantage of what is in store. The discussion will also examine ways businesses can deal with inflation, supply chain issues and workforce shortages.

Copeland is a highly accomplished attorney, focusing in corporate strategy and business incentive solutions with a 30-year record of achievement on every side of the corporate relocation and site selection process. His real-world international experience as a corporate executive for more than a decade allows him to provide a higher level of insight few consultants can match. As a former North Carolina Secretary of Commerce, Copeland helped bring more than 81,000 jobs and more than $18.4 billion of investment to the state. Under his leadership, North Carolina experienced the largest annual inward investment in the history of the state. He believes that economic development is understanding the intersection of politics and law.
